Edgar Allan Poe

The Fall of the House of Usher

(Part of the book Complete Stories of Edgar Allan Poe, The)

DURING the whole of a dull, dark, and soundless day in the autumn of the year, when the clouds hung oppressively low in the heavens, I had been passing alone, on horseback, through a singularly dreary tract of country; and at length found myself, as the shades of the evening drew on, within view of the melancholy House of Usher. I know not how it was - but, with the first glimpse of the building, a sense of insufferable gloom pervaded my spirit. I say insufferable; for the feeling was unrelieved by any of that half-pleasurable, because poetic, sentiment, with which the mind usually receives even the sternest natural images of the desolate or terrible. I looked upon the scene before me - upon the mere house, and the simple landscape features of the domain - upon the bleak walls - upon the vacant eye-like windows - upon a few rank sedges - and upon a few white trunks of decayed trees - with an utter depression of soul which I can compare to no earthly sensation more properly than to the after-dream of the reveller upon opium - the bitter lapse into everyday life - the hideous dropping off of the veil. There was an iciness, a sinking, a sickening of the heart - an unredeemed dreariness of thought which no goading of the imagination could torture into aught of the sublime. What was it - I paused to think - what was it that so unnerved me in the contemplation of the House of Usher? It was a mystery all insoluble; nor could I grapple with the shadowy fancies that crowded upon me as I pondered. I was forced to fall back upon the unsatisfactory conclusion, that while, beyond doubt, there are combinations of very simple natural objects which have the power of thus affecting us, still the analysis of this

soundless silent
oppressively terribly (because of mistreatment) singularly surprisingly dreary depressing
tract area (of land) melancholy sad
I know not I do not know glimpse short look insufferable (so terrible that you can't put up with it) gloom sadness/darkness pervaded spreaded (or existed) throughout
pleasurable pleasant-feeling
sentiment feeling sternest most serious and sad desolate lonely and empty landscape (wide view of a nature scene/wide area of beautiful land)
bleak depressing and hopeless
vacant empty explication très simple et un audio de la prononciation.

DURING the whole of a dull, dark, and silent day in the autumn of the year, when the clouds hung terribly (because of mistreatment) low in the heavens, I had been passing alone, on horseback through a surprisingly depressing area (of land) of country; and at length found myself in a wood. The shades of the evening drew on, within view of the sad House of Usher. I do not know why, but, with the first short look of the building, a sense of (so terrible that you can't put it into words) sadness/darkness spreaded (or existed) throughout my spirit. I say (so terrible that you can't put it into words); for the feeling was unrelieved by any of that half-pleasant-feeling, because it was a feeling, with which the mind usually receives even the most serious and sad natural impressions. I looked upon the scene before me - upon the melancholy and empty or terrible. I looked upon the simple (wide view of a nature scene/wide area of beautiful land) features of the landscape - upon the depressing and hopeless walls - upon the empty eye-like windows - upon the bushes - and upon a few white trunks of (rotted/became ruined or worse) trees - upon the depression of soul which I can compare to no earthly feeling/excited feeling more than to the after-dream of the partier upon opium - the bitter slide into everyday life - the ugly dropping off of the cover. There was an iciness, a sinking, a sickening of the heart, and a kind of dead stop, like that which follows us when we have run with exertion and rapidity down a long hill; the mind becoming dim, and the body faint, with the fatigues of the长途跋涉.
