

Text 1 : BBC News Why is EU struggling with migrants and asylum?

21 September 2015

Europe is experiencing one of the most significant influxes of migrants and refugees in its history. Pushed by civil war and terror and pulled by the promise of a better life, hundreds of thousands of people have fled the Middle East and Africa, risking their lives along the way.

5 The scale of the crisis has put huge pressures on some destination countries, particularly Greece, Austria, and Hungary. At least 350,000 migrants crossed the EU's borders in January-August 2015, compared with just 280,000 during the whole of 2014.

And that 350,000 figure - an estimate from the International Organization for Migration (IOM) - does not include the many who crossed a border undetected.

10 Among the forces driving people to take such risks are the conflicts raging in Syria and Afghanistan, and human rights abuses in Eritrea. The majority - 62% - of those who have reached Europe by boat so far this year are from those three countries.

There are also people setting out from Libya, Sudan, Pakistan, Nigeria, Kosovo, Iraq, Iran, Darfur, Somalia and other countries in the hope of a new life somewhere like Germany, France or the UK.

Text 2 : BBC News Are EU countries doing their fair share?

Germany has been critical of France and the UK over the countries' relatively meagre commitments to take people in and called on all EU members to do more.

Earlier this month, European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker set out proposals for 120,000 additional asylum seekers to be distributed among EU nations, with binding quotas.

5 Mr Juncker's proposals were criticised by the Czech Republic, Slovakia, Poland and Romania.

For years the EU has been struggling to harmonise asylum policy. That is difficult with 28 member states, each with their own police force and judiciary.

10 Championing the rights of poor migrants is difficult as the economic climate is still gloomy, many Europeans are unemployed and wary of foreign workers, and EU countries are divided over how to share the refugee burden.

More detailed joint rules have been brought in with the Common European Asylum System - but rules are one thing, putting them into practice EU-wide is another challenge.

Text 3 : How do migrants get asylum status in the EU?

They have to satisfy the authorities that they are fleeing persecution and would face harm or even death if sent back to their country of origin.

5 Under EU rules, an asylum seeker has the right to food, first aid and shelter in a reception centre. They should get an individual assessment of their needs. They may be granted asylum by the authorities at "first instance". If unsuccessful, they can appeal against the decision in court, and may win.

Asylum seekers are supposed to be granted the right to work within nine months of arrival.

10 Nearly 104,000 got refugee status in the EU last year, nearly 60,000 subsidiary protection status and just over 20,000 authorisation to stay for humanitarian reasons. (Austria was not included in the data.)

Text 1 : BBC News Why is EU struggling with migrants and asylum?

Suggest a suitable translation for the following words :

assessment (4) : évaluation granted (4) : accorder instance (5) : dans un premier temps subsidiary (8) : complémentaire

Take down a few notes and give an oral account of your document to your partners.

Text 2 : BBC News Are EU countries doing their fair share?

Suggest a suitable translation for the following words :

Set out from (3) : partir de binding (4) contraignant championing (8) : défendre gloomy (8) sombre to be wary of (9) : se méfier de.

Take down a few notes and give an oral account of your document to your partners.

Text 3 : How do migrants get asylum status in the EU?

Suggest a suitable translation for the following words :

influx (1) : afflux figure (7) : chiffre set out from (12) : partir

Take down a few notes and give an oral account of your document to your partners.