I definitely don't agree with the NYPD and Bloomberg because Street Art is the liberty of expressing yourself and Banksy is the perfect example. She should be glad because it's not everyday that an incredible artist paints something on your wall. It's fantastic!

I would remove the entire section of that wall and sell the piece to the highest bidder.

It's so pretty! I love it. Why would this be considered vandalism?
At least it's not a bunch of incoherent swirls in different colors like most graffiti.

Gah! Who cares? This is NOT a notable piece of art. It is a flimsy bit of self-promotion...

Thanks for this. It's nice to see someone actually deliberating about the difficulties this presents for conscientious building owners, especially since, as the author points out, it really is a beautiful piece.

Example of short comments :

- I think Cara should preserve Banksy's graffiti! It's beautiful and it will attract many tourists. Your building will have more value.
- It is your duty to preserve this graffiti. It's art, not vandalism, and Banksy is extremely famous. It will make you rich.
- You should erase this tag. It's ugly and it's vandalism. Besides, it's illegal and you should not encourage this.
- You should be careful: I live in the UK and here walls that contained Banksy graffiti have been broken down by some people just to steal them.
