Fake news and vaccines

The Pfizer/BioNtech will alter you DNA

- mRNA vaccines such as those developed by Pfizer-BioNTech and Moderna do not use DNA.
- In humans, progression is always from DNA to protein RNA you can't go from RNA to DNA in human cells. It's not possible because we just don't have the machinery to deal with it. So there should be no concern that the RNA vaccine somehow enters human DNA and transforms.
- There is a type of microbe that can produce DNA from RNA – retroviruses like HIV. And the DNA generated by retroviruses can sometimes integrate into cells

Lung tissue of a foetus in the coronavirus vaccine

A video made by a woman about the Oxford AstraZenca vaccine for COVID-19 was uploading. The woman was speaking about the composition of the vaccine.

The video had hundred of thousands of views.

The vaccine would contain the lung tissue of a 14-week-old aborted Caucasian male foetus which is fake. The woman said: "any body else that doesn't want aborted fetal tissue fragments put into".

Dr David Matthews, a reader of virology at Bristol University and co-author on the vaccine study, told Reuters. "Many virus vaccines are made in embryonic/foetal derived cell lines and then the vaccine is purified away from these cells to exceptionally high standards. Most of these cell lines (including MRC-5 cells and 293 cells) were derived from tissue samples taken from fetuses aborted in the 1960s and 1970s and the cells have been grown in laboratories all over the world since then."

FAKE NEWS

The Pfizer/BioNtech vaccine will alter your DNA

Scientists have proven that injecting the vaccine into a person does not alter the DNA of a human cell. It works by instructing the body to produce a protein that is present on the surface of the coronavirus. The immune system then learns to recognize and produce antibodies against the protein.
